

A Reproduction Cypriot Grey Slip Amphora

Cipro-Geometric II-III. (950-700 BC)

Height 15.6cm × diameter 12.2cm × base 5.8cm

An amphora made of greenish buff clay, of ovoid body with vertical grooves and linear decoration in matt grey slip, with a wide concave neck and respective horizontal rim, with a pair of oval handles extending from rim to body

This unique artefact was excavated by the Swedish Cyprus Expedition in 1930 at Amathus, in level 40, stratum 1 of a chamber in Tomb 7.

It has been part of the Cyprus collection at the Medelhavsmuseet, Stockholm, Sweden (Inv. No.: A. 007:234) since 1930.

The UNESCO Chair on Digital Cultural Heritage led a landmark initiative to digitise the largest collection of Cypriot artefacts held outside Cyprus, marking the first time a collection has been digitally repatriated at this scale.

This initiative followed agreements signed between the Ministry of Culture of Sweden and the Cyprus University of Technology in Limassol, enabling the virtual repatriation of over thousands of objects.

Representing a significant part of the Cypriot memory in exile, the digitised artefacts are now visible and available to everyone worldwide in Open Access through the EU Digital Library Europeana supporting education, research and collaborative work by students and scholars across the globe.
